THE BLUE AND WHITE

---

12/53 Classical N.S. - G

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America and to the Republic for which it stands; one Nation, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

THE BLUE AND WHITE

THE HONOR ROLL IS PRESENTED TO DR. HILL

On January 17, the Service Honor Roll was presented to Dr. William C. Hill by Richard McMahon on behalf of the Student Government. At the impressive dedication exercises, Captain Neil O'Malley of the Marine Recruiting Office and Lt. Commander Margaret Disert of the Waves' School in Northampton were guest speakers.

The Honor Roll is the work of the Student Government, who compiled the list and obtained the necessary financial support for the project. It is intended that the roll shall include the names of all Classical graduates, beginning with the class of 1910. The Student Government realizes that the list may be incomplete and will be glad to be informed of any omitted names.

The Honor Roll, of which a small part has been printed on the next page, is mounted in the corridor near the assembly hall below the mural which is pictured above. The two hemispheres represent the continents of the world and symbolize global war. The large American eagle grasps in its talons the arrows of war and the olive branch of peace. The head of the eagle is turned in the direction of peace. The background represents the different environments of our fighting men.

The mural was done by students in the art department.

We the Students of Classical High School dedicate this book to who this June completes his thirty-fourth year as principal of the best school in the solar system.

We thank him for his kindness, his skill, his wisdom, his understanding.

We revere him for the high ideals of scholarship and character which he has made a part of the Classical tradition.

And we assure him that we shall never forget the Categorical Imperative of Immanuel Kant which he has made in truth so large a part of the Classical social consciousness.

No one has
do that which if everyone did it, would destroy society.

Immanuel Kant

THE LIGHT OF EDUCATION

PERHAPS THE MOST VALUABLE RESULT
OF ALL EDUCATION IS THE ABILITY
TO MAKE YOURSELF DO THE THING
YOU HAVE TO DO WHEN IT OUGHT TO BE DONE, WHETHER YOU LIKE IT OR NOT.

THOMAS HENRY HUXLEY

The Right Way

I am a true patriot, but I was not always so. In being a good American, I did not realize that tolerance was essential. Because of their religion, I hated the Jews. Because of their color, I hated the Negro. When I progressed, I was clever; when they progressed, they were sly. I was ambitious, they were grasping. Even though I knew only a few representatives of each group, my prejudices against all of both groups were unshaken. But all this was before I saw that my way of thinking was contrary to the American way, that it was dangerous, that it is unjust to judge a race by a minority of its members, and, above all, that if I must hate a man, it should be for the evil in him, not for his country, color, or religion. If most of us were to think as I used to think, the ideal of liberty and justice for all will be betrayed. At least I have learned that for the well-being of myself, of my neighbors, and of my nation, I must not do that which, if everyone did it, would destroy society.

The Birds of 1943<sup>1</sup>/<sub>2</sub>

Mr. Hill, and other guests of the class of 1943 and a half:

Classical High School is noted for many, many things, but few people realize that Classical this year has had, on the third floor, in a big cage called 323 — an aviary. Briefly, I, the keeper of this ornithological zoo, shall tell you something about these birds of 1943 and a half.

I quote, "Birds are the most active animals in existence because their energy is available through the oxidation of relatively more food than most animals consume." End of quote. The excess energy of the birds of 323 is obtained through the surreptitious consumption of sandwiches behind upturned desk covers during home room periods.

These Classical birds are a motley flock. Many are game birds, and we have one or two flycatchers, and several larks; but chickadees and blue-jays are in the majority. John Kieran in his little book, "Nature Notes," speaks of the cheerfulness and friendliness of the chickadees, and he surmises that suet is their favorite food. How true! My little chickadees are certainly ever friendly and cheerful, and they're always chewing the fat! My bluejays are very handsome and dashing, but, oh, so noisy!

We have a few night birds. Some of these are wise young owls that stay up nights gaining more wisdom. They have been a source of great pleasure to me because of their erudition, and their calm, quiet dignity.

The other nocturnal birds are nighthawks that usually come winging back to their perches anywhere from nine-one a. m. to ten-one a. m. Sometimes, I'm sorry to say, they stay away all day. And how I miss them!

One of the most mysterious instincts of birds is that which controls their migrations; and some of these Classical birds are well provided with that instinct. I suspect that they have frequently migrated to Hull Dobbs, Cupid's Inn, and other foreign feeding stations, when they should have been down in our own Classical sanctuary.

Many birds have the remarkable ability to change the color of their feathers at certain times. Last Friday night these birds did something more spectacular. They took on the plumage of bluebirds, cardinals, flamingoes, peacocks, white herons, and — PENGUINS!

One authority on birds claims that bird study is a delightful challenge. I heartily agree with him, although, sometimes, in the midst of the twittering, cackling, and squawking, I have thought that at this dinner I would have to sing a Swan Song. But, now that I have survived without having developed into a common loon, or gone cuckoo — I realize that I have been in charge of a flock of grand birds. We have not had any shrieks, vultures, buzzards, or stormy petrels in our Aviary, and we have had a fine eaglet as leader of the flock. And so, my only regret is that I did not have a pair of good field glasses to see more of what was going on in the bird cage of 323.

The History of the Class of 1943<sup>1</sup><sub>2</sub>

*We were a class of freshmen green,
The greenest Classical had ever seen;
Wondering why when late for class,
We always got a detention pass.*

Our first few days were spent hopelessly wandering around the corridors searching for an obscure room, such as 323. After a get-acquainted party, we began to feel a little more at home and class elections were held. Carl Jacobs was elected president; Martha Hopkins, vice-president; Antonetta Romano, secretary; Thomas Howard, treasurer; and Robert Glidden, member-at-large.

With Miss Fitzgerald and Mr. Lynch as class advisers, we became an organized class, and when June, 1941, rolled around, we were making our share of noise in the halls.

Returning in September, we gazed patronizingly at the incoming 10B's, and felt very high and mighty. We were delighted to find that for a while, we were to be dismissed at 12:15, while the lunch-room was being done over. However, our delight in the modern fixtures was somewhat modified by our return to our regular 2:30 schedule.

Days passed in work and play, and before we knew it, we were planning for Christmas. Then came Sunday, December 7th. Overnight we changed from happy-go-lucky students, whose minds were full of parties and good times, to serious and determined individuals. Faces began to drop out of classes as boys left to join the service. With such momentous things in our minds, the new year came upon us, and we suddenly realized our first full year as Classicalites was ended.

*We were a class of juniors bright,
And everything we did was right;
But teachers promptly let us know,
That they did not find it so.*

With the beginning of our junior year, a new word was added to our vocabularies — rationing. It wasn't long before we all became acquainted with that novel mode of transportation — walking.

In the midst of this confusion, we held our elections. Robert Woody was elected president; Martha Hopkins, vice-president; Thomas Howard, treasurer; Joanne MacDonald, secretary; and Carl Jacobs, member-at-large.

Toward the end of school, we planned a dance called the "Spring Fling." Here let it be said that nothing as trifling as the lack of gas could ever stop a Classicalite. Bicycles were rolled out, buggies were dusted up, and the dance was attended in grand style.

With the news of Classical's team winning the baseball championship ringing in our ears, we left for summer vacation.

September arrived all too soon, and back we came to find the landscape enhanced by piles of coal.

A change in school time gave us an extra hour of sleep in the morning. It also meant an added hour of school in the afternoon.

Toward the end of our junior year, we finally agreed on class colors which were green and gold. From then on, we eagerly awaited our banner.

January found our class very much decreased as we finished our second year in Classical.

*We were a class of seniors small,
Not half-filling the study hall;
But our years at Classical have been a success,
Sorrow at leaving, we now express.*

At last we were seniors! From a class of 130 strong, we had diminished to 65. Those who preferred joining the regular June class had done so, leaving only 60 remaining seniors in possession of 323. Many of us, too, were planning on staying through until June, but wishing it, we were given the privilege of having our activities with those leaving in January. "Thank you, Mr. Hill."

For the last time we held our elections. James Gaylord was elected president; Philip McKeague, vice-president; Elva Foerster, secretary; Robert Hogg, treasurer; and Stewart McCracken, member-at-large. Robert Hogg left for the Army, and Russell Chase was then elected treasurer.

Despite the fact that we were now proud seniors, we held our Junior Prom with the Junior class. It was a case of "better late than never."

Toward June our teachers noticed a decided increase in the number of hands waving to answer questions. (We had to show our class rings somehow, didn't we?)

Before vacation, we said good-bye to Mr. Lynch, one of our advisers, who left to train the Air Cadets at Springfield College. He was replaced by Miss Bowles. About the same time, we also said good-bye to Mr. Cook, our assistant principal, who left to become acting principal of Forest Park Junior High.

On our return in September, we were dazzled by the splendor of the front hall. We could hardly believe our eyes — it had been re-decorated.

In October our arm bands and hats arrived. What a day that was! We walked around as proud as peacocks, refusing to take them off. (The boys were more vain than the girls.)

All at once, we began to realize our high school days were nearly over, and while "Pistol Packin' Mama" was blaring from every radio, we began in earnest to prepare for graduation. Overnight, 323 became a bee hive of activity as plans for the class promenade and banquet got under way. Then Miss Fitzgerald's troubles in home-room began. There was a continual buzz as members of committees went into conference. Students began mysteriously to disappear into 318 and Mr. Hall's office.

After weeks of worrying and planning, the date of the prom finally came, and the evening, which was all too short, proved to be a gala success. Thoughts then turned to the banquet, which also was an evening never to be forgotten.

The climax of our senior year was the graduation. Friday, January 21, 1944, nineteen of our classmates received their diplomas. Thirty-three years ago, the first mid-year graduation was held. These members of our class held the distinction of being the last class to graduate in the middle of the year. With this graduation, the history of the class of 1943<sup>1</sup><sub>2</sub> drew to a close. It was a grand three years.

The Prophecy of the Class of 1943<sup>1</sup>

The Prophecy Committee of the Class of 1943 and a half, finding it exceedingly difficult to probe into the haze of the future, and seeking inspiration, decided to take a Caribbean cruise on a banana boat during the Christmas vacation. Through the influence of the eminent, internationally known Dr. Rolland Smith, who secretly goes to Washington every other week-end on official business, we obtained special permission from the United States Shipping Board to make this trip. The cruise was progressing satisfactorily when the boat left its Caribbean dock and started homeward, but no inspiration had as yet presented itself. The first day out in the middle of the balmy Gulf of Mexico, the members of the Committee draped themselves over the ship's rail — apparently to view the scenery, but probably to ease their sea-sickness.

"Oh, look, there's a shark! See its fin cutting the water!" someone cried.

We looked, but Robert Collier, who happened to have his glasses on, sputtered, "That's no shark; that's a torpedo!"

We hoped his glasses were only glazed with sea-spray; but this hope, together with the glasses, was dashed to pieces by a splintering, sickening crash. A few hours later we were bobbing about on the big green ocean in a tiny lifeboat. Ramon Mentor took an inventory of our possessions, and found them to be — six Roman candles, one pea-shooter, and three flares. As if we hadn't had enough fireworks already!

Several days later we were washed up on the beach of a deserted tropical isle. We soon discovered a gurgling spring which Herman Nash, boy scout and naturalist of the Committee, blithely informed us gushed Aqua Mania, the cause of Hydro-insanity. David Davidson, who was nearly unconscious anyway, having done all the rowing, was the first to wet his parched lips with the tainted water. The rest of the dauntless committee soon followed suit.

Suddenly — or was it hours later? — a shining city appeared before our befogged eyes! Jean Rivard, who had been studying stenography, set down the account of the events that follow.

As we stood gazing down a spacious avenue, a burly traffic officer approached us. "Vagrants or visitors?" he queried.

We recognized him as Edwin Bobak, but he didn't seem to know us. We asked our whereabouts, and he looked hurt and astonished.

"Why, you mean to tell me that you don't know that this is the world metropolis — Springfield, Massachusetts, in the year 1965. Population — one hundred and fifty million! Its phenomenal growth has astonished everyone — including ourselves. But wait, let me show you to the Chamber of Commerce executive of Lower Basin Street. He can tell you more than I."

Nancy Prouty, receptionist, ushered us into the inner sanctum to the presence of the executive, a blond-haired fellow, who was surrounded by a bevy of beautiful girls. Looking sharply, we saw that it was Marvin Schreiber. He explained that he could not take us through his fair city because business was tying him up. However, he cheerfully loaned us his private switchboard operator, Barbara Crandall, whom we gayly followed out the door. Emerging on the Main Street we passed by a large Super Mart. There, Barbara paused to point out a superb window display decorated with an Hawaiian motif — pineapples.

"This," she informed us, "was designed by June Oatley, the renowned authority on things Hawaiian."

We were furthermore astonished by a gaudy sign being hoisted into place. It read: "S. FINKEL & SONS".

"This store," we were told, "was bought only yesterday by Saul Finkel, who is reputed to have accumulated a tidy sum playing professional basketball."

As we were about to call a halt in front of a massive edifice bearing the name Pynchon Memorial Laboratories, we were crowded off the sidewalk by a zoot-suited man out of Esquire, accompanied by two sophisticates. The fashion-plate was Walter Chizinsky, and basking in his radiance were Beverly Stebbins and Doris Stone.

Entering the Pynchon Laboratories we caught a glimpse of Sam Ringel, up and coming scientist, attempting to grow electro-magnets under Westinghouse sponsorship. Also employed at the Memorial was Robert Collier, M.D., conducting invaluable research in a field dealing with the reincarnation of dead beats. Before making our exit we were allowed to watch, at work, Betty Gerber and Antonetta Romano making their twentieth entry in the contest requiring an explanation of Einstein's Theory in 250,000 words — more or less.

Hearing an unearthly howl coming from a nearby building we were about to dash madly across the street when we were frozen in our tracks by the sudden screech of brakes. A luxurious, sleek, black limousine had swung around the corner, narrowly missing our little group. In it were mink-coated, jewel-bedecked Jean Chapman and Helen Brown on their way to the opera. Jean gave us a haughty glance, while Helen shouted to her suave chauffeur, Ramon Mentor, to drive on.

Remembering the purpose of our reckless flight, we scurried through a door and crowded into an elevator. At the same time we noticed a passenger beside us with a peculiar gleam in his eye. It was Stewart McCracken, private detective and partner of that super-sleuth, Richardo Wolf. Stewart confided in us that he had an idea business might be picking up. He told us of a case in which he found John, from John's other wife, and had identified him as being the same character as Dear John.

On arriving at the apartment whence the noise we heard had emanated, we were all crestfallen. The place was the office of Dentist George Driller Gray, former riveter at Lockheed. Strapped to a chair was Howard Rock, eminent baritone, who was employing George as a means of reaching low c below c. Hygienists Jean Rivard and Marilyn White were busily filling Rock's mouth with drills and rubber dams. Waiting her turn, and engrossed in the Book of the Day was Freda Narkin, famous authoress and society editor for the "Out of Times" newspaper. Colonel Bob Woody, recently returned from a Ski Carnival in Siberia, was making an appointment to get fitted for a new set of teeth. He had traded his last set to Madelaine von Tobel for a pair of skis. She regards them as a highly prized addition to her growing collection.

Wandering down a side street we were, without warning, set to trembling and vibrating. A short distance away a monstrous machine containing Earl Edwall, physicist, and Ralph Ilgovsky, outstanding chemist and after-dinner speaker, burst through the surface of the earth. Julie Harmon, newspaper columnist, emerged to explain that they were excavating for Sea Dust.

For the first time we began to realize that we were famished, and we entered the first restaurant we came upon. Society matrons, Barbara Main and Leah Blacher, were waiting on table there — as an amusing diversion from their extremely boring social affairs.

While we were eating we tuned in the radio-television set and were delightfully surprised to see and hear the Mayor of Springfield, the Honorable James Jim Gaylord. His seventh-term campaign featured the proposed erection of a new basketball stadium. Mayor Gaylord and his four sons make up one of the outstanding teams in the East. The program was suddenly interrupted. "Flash! . . . Burnie Londerville has simplified the Rocket Ship to enable a five-year-old to sit at the controls! He is happy to state that he soon hopes to find a way to make it fly!"

Changing the program with a flick of the dial, we tuned in and flashed on the screen — the All-Girl Orchestra of Doris Hellerman playing the sweetest music this side of Harlem. This ultra-conservative orchestra featured Barbara Keenan at the harpsichord, Noreen Parker at the bazooka, and Velma Beeman at the piano. A huge crowd had turned out to listen to the music of twenty years ago. Velma had revived the two decade old boogie woogie. Before leaving the restaurant we tuned in on the latest sports news. Bill Powell, former seven-letter man at the University of Springfield, had returned to become head coach in his home town college.

Back on Main Street we were about to hail one of the dilapidated Model Z taxis of the Robert Darden Taxi Company, when Ethel O'Neil, driving for a rival company, sped past Bob's taxi, taking off the two fenders. Harold Kallin and Robert Wallace, registered wreckers, flashing their Sears-Roebuck licenses, arrived in their helicopter to tow Bob and his taxi away for repairs.

Attracted by the hordes of admiring paper boys flocking around beauteous Ann Stelos, who had turned her charms toward selling papers for the benefit of the annual newsboys' outing, we purchased a Springfield Union.

When we stopped at the Mary Cregan and Mildred Cruze Milk Bar to have a chocolate malted, we opened our Union and saw the name of Editor Sally Herbert in black two-inch type. The first page dealt exclusively with speeches by Marjorie Hollister and Elva Foerster, members of the City Council, and one by School Commissioner Philip McKeague, who had been awarded a tenth term because of his deep interest in school affairs.

In the world of entertainment we noted that wealthy Bill Axtell was producing another sensational show at the Copaca Banza Club. Starring in the cast were Myra Weinberg, pre-Shakespearian lecturer, and Phyllis Barton, fiery torch singer. It was rumored that the financial backer of the show was Russell Chase, also city treasurer.

Discarding our newspaper and venturing in Maybury's — Ellen Maybury's famous department store, we were surrounded by Gallup Poll workers Barbara Carrigan and Dolores Cera. They were eager to find our reactions, if any. We escaped their volume of questions by dashing out a side door — right into the arms of Mary Hiney and Barbara Rohan who were still taking first aid courses and were in desperate need of fresh victims. Together with Driver Irwin Chase they packed us off in a waiting ambulance bound for Herman Nash's Restful Sanitarium.

We were almost at our destination when, after turning a corner, we found ourselves racing head on into a brick wall. Untangling ourselves from the debris we were greeted by David Davidson, eminent mathematician, who gleefully informed us that he at last had found out the reaction when an irresistible force and an immovable object meet.

We thought we saw Gilda Wendorff and Sulamith Moses riding up on a bicycle built for two, but the city and its inhabitants seemed to be disappearing. We were once again back on our tropic isle, waving frantically at another banana boat passing by.

The Will of the Class of 1943 $\frac{1}{2}$

In the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and forty-four, we the class of 1943 $\frac{1}{2}$  being of sound(?) minds and judgment, and in full possession of all our faculties, do hereby declare and publish this, our last will and testament, in order that posterity may benefit by our superfluous talents and experiences.

ARTICLE I: To Dr Hill, our unparalleled principal, under whose able leadership Classical has gained and maintained an enviable reputation in educational circles, we bequeath our sincere appreciation for the wise counsel he has bestowed upon us during our three years.

ARTICLE II: To Mr. Jackson, who has become a popular member of the Classical faculty and a friend of Classical students, we leave the hope that he is so enjoying his first year at Classical that he will wish to stay on rather than go back up the hill.

ARTICLE III: To our class advisers, Miss Bowles, Miss FitzGerald, and Mr. Lynch, we leave our thanks for their wholehearted assistance in organizing our extra-curricular activities. In addition we leave to Miss FitzGerald a fund of money to be expended on chemical research to concoct a gas that can be turned on at the beginning of each home-room period; the inspired gas to have the power to paralyze innocuously for twenty-five minutes the vocal cords of every pupil, and, at the same time, to imbue everyone with the scholarly temperament of Herman Nash. (Footnote — This latter codicil is left only at Miss FitzGerald's specific request. It wasn't our idea.)

ARTICLE IV: To the faculty advisers of Bob Tyson's class, namely Mr. and Mrs. Edwin E. Smith and Mr. William S. Finn, we leave an apparatus devised by our class physicists: the said apparatus emits supercharged magnetic alpha, beta, and gamma rays which promptly steer without deviation every senior committee member to the appointed place of meeting.

ARTICLE V: To Mr. Finn we also leave a manuscript on why girls wear make-up, and a super-collection of blue polka dot bow ties.

ARTICLE VI: To our capable Miss Battis we leave twenty shares of stock in a pen factory so that she will always have enough pens to supply the absent-minded girls in her physiology classes.

ARTICLE VII: To Mr. Hess, Walter Chizinsky and Richard Wolf leave their notes on boy and girl chemical combinations so that Mr. Hess may add them to his long list of yarns.

ARTICLE VIII: To Miss White's future history students we leave a shortened edition of Gregg to which they can refer when faced with one of her one-thousand word lectures.

ARTICLE IX: Stewart McCracken leaves his heart at Commerce.

ARTICLE X: Jean Chapman leaves her walk to Nancy Seaman for further development.

ARTICLE XI: Robert Collier and David Davidson leave their combined mathematical ability to Robert Ball.

ARTICLE XII: Irwin Chase leaves an engraved record of his ailments to Mrs. Buzzell.

ARTICLE XIII: Marjorie Hollister leaves her efficient executive abilities to the chairman of the next senior prom.

ARTICLE XIV: Antonetta Romano leaves her secretary's reports to the incoming freshman class; the said reports to be used as guides on how to record the minutes of class meetings.

ARTICLE XV: Beverly Stebbins leaves her formula for her robust physique to Mrs. Dayton to be bestowed by her upon some anemic freshman.

ARTICLE XVI: Betty Gerber leaves her G. Fox labels to some clothes-conscious freshman.

ARTICLE XVII: Saul Finkel leaves a carload of Hershey Bars to the President of the next senior class for distribution among hungry seniors during home-room period in 323.

ARTICLE XVIII: Freda Narkin leaves her entire fortune to build a swimming pool for the future students of Classical.

ARTICLE XIX: Big-hearted Philip McKeague leaves his inexhaustible supply of hot air to warm 323 on Monday mornings.

ARTICLE XX: Ellen Maybury leaves her technique for making the honor roll to those students who are perennial members of the probation list.

ARTICLE XXI: Sam Ringel leaves a carton of Juicy Fruit to Miss Sauer.

ARTICLE XXII: Herman Nash leaves to "Red" Bailey two framed mottoes, "Silence is golden" and "Still water runs deep."

ARTICLE XXIII: Harold Kallin leaves his good-natured personality to his two proteges, Dicky Posnick and Dave Goldman.

ARTICLE XXIV: Russell Chase leaves his shy, sedate manner to Garth Drewry.

ARTICLE XXV: William "Lefty" Powell leaves — much to the regret of the faculty who have always considered him a model of punctuality and scholarly industry.

ARTICLE XXVI: Marvin Schreiber leaves his collection of pin-up girls to be divided equally among the male populace of Classical.

ARTICLE XXVII: Myra Weinberg leaves her many fine suggestions to the writers of wills in future years.

ARTICLE XXVIII: Leah Blacher leaves her storehouse of Spanish knowledge to Milton Cummings.

ARTICLE XXIX: Barbara Crandall leaves to all incoming freshman classes the advice to become acquainted with that super-English teacher, Miss Sauer.

ARTICLE XXX: Robert Darden leaves his excellent attendance record inscribed on a plastic plaque as an inspiration to all future generations of Classical.

ARTICLE XXXI: Helen Brown leaves to the office secretaries the patriotic suggestions that her ton or more of excuses be donated to the Junior High paper salvage collection.

ARTICLE XXXII: Ann Stelos leaves her superabundance of energy and her eagerness to expend it in work to the executive committee of the next senior class.

ARTICLE XXXIII: Our debonair president, James Gaylord, leaves his Southern vim and vigor to Bob Tyson.

And in conclusion we, the class of 1943 $\frac{1}{2}$ , leave to all incoming classes the promise of many worthwhile and happy hours of study and companionship enjoyed at the best school in the Solar System.

The Will of the Class of 1944

After due consideration, we, the June class of Classical High School, in the year of our Lord, nineteen hundred and forty-four, being considered reasonably sound of mind and body, do put forth this solemn document as our last will and testament.

To Dr. Hill, our unparalleled principal and friend, we leave our heartfelt thanks and appreciation for the many improvements he has made in our behalf, and, above all, for the advice, guidance, and wisdom he has imparted to us during our "Classical Days".

To our faculty advisors, Mr. Finn and Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Smith, we leave our gratitude for the time and energy they have sacrificed in straightening out our problems.

The Will Committee

ARTICLE I: Jack Bills leaves his sense of humor to all others here present in order that these bequests may be received in the spirit in which they are given.

ARTICLE II: Jean Morgan leaves the management of Classical to Dr. Hill.

ARTICLE III: Bruce Skipton leaves his book, "How to Win Friends and Influence Teachers" to some shy undergraduate.

ARTICLE IV: Beverlee Vibbert leaves her "Veronica Lake" hairdo to Andre Frizzell.

ARTICLE V: Janet Chambers leaves her composure and dignity to Glendora Fulson.

ARTICLE VI: The fairer sex leaves its devout thanks for the multitude of mirrors in the newly decorated powder room.

ARTICLE VII: Joan Lancaster leaves a high level for Bernadette MacPherson to attain. Lengthen, little MacPherson, lengthen!

ARTICLE VIII: The whole class leaves "Commando" Gym with a sigh of relief.

ARTICLE IX: Isabelle Budnitz leaves her machine-gun Latin translations to Val Johnson.

ARTICLE X: The class of '44 leaves Miss Anthony a pair of super-speed roller skates to aid her in clearing the halls at 8:50.

ARTICLE XI: Bob Blinn leaves his feminine following to Ken Rickson.

ARTICLE XII: Art Rist leaves his beautiful ties and suspenders to any junior with an inferiority complex.

ARTICLE XIII: Shel Goidell leaves his ability to do seventeen things at one time to Doug Cummings.

ARTICLE XIV: Jeanne Adams and Mona Lepage leave — much to the relief of the undergraduate girls.

ARTICLE XV: Norton Harding leaves his seven-place logarithm book to Garth Drewry, the up and coming genius of the junior class.

ARTICLE XVI: Peter Prouty leaves his vivid imagination to anyone caught unprepared in Ancient History Class.

ARTICLE XVII: Marilyn Hirshhaut leaves her gymnastic flexibility to Mrs. Dayton to dispose of as she wishes.

ARTICLE XVIII: Bruce Stone leaves a lock of his hair to the girls he left behind.

ARTICLE XIX: The diner-outers of the senior class leave the Arcade lunch to any daring underclassman.

ARTICLE XX: Claude Reed and Walter Weitzman leave their ability to start an argument to George Chapin — if he thinks he can handle it.

ARTICLE XXI: Dick Wolfson leaves his gum-chewing propensities to the junior who finds the twenty-seven wads secreted in 218, third seat, first row.

ARTICLE XXII: Charles Greenberg leaves a new pad of tardy passes to Mr. Brown.

ARTICLE XXIII: Bennett Schneider bequeaths his voice to the city just in case the blackout horns break down.

ARTICLE XXIV: Dave Mount and all seniors on the Traffic Squad leave the safety of the corridors to the discretion of future flat-foots.

ARTICLE XXV: Jack Sampson and Bill Dewey leave the further demolition of Classical to Frank Sternberg and Ken Rickson.

ARTICLE XXVI: Bob Tyson and Jocie Stedman leave together, as usual.

ARTICLE XXVII: Pat Clancy leaves her "auburn" hair to any girl unable to pass R. R. Smith's course.

ARTICLE XXVIII: To each member of the faculty, we bequeath a pair of tweezers to pluck out any grey hairs we have caused. Believing it wise to leave well enough alone, we exclude Mr. Edwin Smith from this bequest.

We, the makers of this will, in name the Willees, do leave this document as evidence of our — as the great Winston Churchill spake — "Blood, sweat, and tears". Signed:

The History of the Class of 1944

Time: The day before graduation.

Place: Civic court, Springfield.

Setting: Everybody except E. E. Smith, counsel for defense, who is just stepping out for a wedge of rhubarb pie with orange sherbet (the lunchroom special). He is recalled by the stern voice of Bailiff D. Brown.

Bailiff D. Brown: Hear ye, hear ye, hear ye! Court is now in session. Classical High School vs. the Class of 1944. H. R. Jeffery, prosecuting attorney; E. E. Smith, defense attorney.

Judge W. C. Hill: (Flourishing gavel) Court will please come to order. The Class of 1944 has been charged with failure to live up to the high standards set by previous graduating classes. Commence with the trial. Call the first witness to the stand.

Miss Anthony is sworn in by Clerk Miss E. Stone, and testifies against the Class of 1944:

Miss Anthony: (Flatly) They had an easy time of it in their freshman year . . . eight weeks of half days and shortened periods because of the new lunchroom, which was not yet completed. Yes, and it was that year war was declared!

The voice of the defense attorney booms across the sea of . . . ah . . . faces:

E. E. Smith: I object! That last was not the fault of the Class of '44!

Judge Hill: Objection sustained. Strike it out. Any further questions, counselor?

H. R. Jeffery: Well, now, I think not. Your witness.

E. E. Smith: You mentioned the shortened periods. Is it not true, nevertheless, that despite this fact, the first honor roll proved to be a record-breaker?

Miss Anthony: Well, they were the largest class ever to enter.

E. E. Smith: None the less, they had the disadvantage of less time for class discussion.

Miss Anthony: We-e-ell . . .

E. E. Smith: That's all. You may step down.

H. R. Jeffery: Call Miss FitzGerald to the stand, please.

Bailiff Brown: Miss FitzGerald to the stand, please!
Miss FitzGerald to the stand, please!! MISS FITZGERALD TO THE STAND, PLEEZ!!!

Miss FitzGerald tears herself away from her ouija board and ascends thoughtfully to the afore-mentioned stand, is sworn at . . . excuse it; we mean in . . . and volunteers the following:

Miss FitzGerald: (Absent-mindedly) They had lots of time out for rationing in all three years. And when the hours were changed in September, 1942, to 9:15 A.M. to 3:15 P.M., they had that much later to sleep in the morning.

H. R. Jeffery: All very true! Yes, yes. Your witness.

E. E. Smith: Will you tell the jury why the hours were changed?

Miss FitzGerald: Well, it was because the earlier buses were needed for war workers.

E. E. Smith: A few weeks later, the hours became 9:00 A.M. to 3:15 P.M. And because of the new schedule, classes were held five times a week instead of four, and there were six periods a day instead of five as in previous years. Right?

Miss FitzGerald: Yes, but they only had homework in each subject every other day.

Judge Hill: (Sternly) The witness will please answer only the question put to her.

Miss FitzGerald: Yes, your honor.

E. E. Smith: Also, when they had so much time out, they cheerfully volunteered their services to aid in the rationing, and uncomplainingly did the extra homework assigned them. Is that not true?

Miss FitzGerald: All except the "uncomplaining" part.

E. E. Smith: That's all, thank you!

H. R. Jeffery: Call Miss Clark to the stand, please.

Bailiff Brown: Miss Clark, please!

Unhesitatingly Miss Clark takes the stand and testifies thus:

Miss Clark: (Briskly) I'm not alone in thinking that the members of the Class of '44 were, at the beginning of their junior year, physical wrecks. Besides, there were popular rumors to the effect that their class dance of that year was a huge flop.

H. R. Jeffery: Yes, yes, yes! Yes. Your witness, counselor.

E. E. Smith: Now, Miss Clark, won't you admit that the new commando gym was responsible for the physical condition of the members of this class? And despite this fact, with this class's help, Classical tied Trade for the Little Three Championship in football, and beat Cathedral in basketball. And furthermore, although the class dance did not prove as huge a success as it might have been, the G.A.A. dance was particularly good. Am I correct?

Miss Clark: (Patiently) Junior Prom big flop!!!

E. E. Smith: Hrrumph! That's all, Miss Clark.

Thus ended the case against the Class of 1944. Tragic, don't you think?

When the prosecuting attorney had had a chance to chew off all his fingernails, Judge Hill asked: "Have you any more witnesses, counselor?"

H. R. Jeffrey: Well, now; no, your honor.

Judge Hill: Then we'll proceed with the trial. Call the first witness for the defense.

E. E. Smith: I'd like to call Mr. Finn to the stand, please.

Eagerly Mr. Finn takes the stand, and upon being questioned, tells all.

Mr. Finn: (Bubbling over with praise) The Class of 1944 is one of the best Classical has ever had! In the first place, look at what fine leaders they chose in their first year — Bob Tyson, president; Janet Fehm, vice-president; Joyce Engelson, secretary; Bill Swan, treasurer; and Patty Rapp, member-at-large. Their freshman dance, the Spring Fling, was a big success!!

E. E. Smith: All quite correct. Thank . . .

Mr. Finn: One moment, please; I haven't finished. The famous swing assembly and the "Sons of Pun" show, both of that year, show that this class was an enterprising one. They did their share in athletics, too. That was the year Classical beat Tech in basketball. And one of their own classmates, Dorothy-Ann Freeman, was chosen in a city-wide contest as a national Quiz Kid. That proves they were a smart class!

H. R. Jeffrey: Your honor, I object! That is a false assumption. Because one of the members of the Class of '44 was particularly bright, it does not mean they all are!

Judge Hill: Ahem! Perhaps we had best not discuss that. Strike it out.

E. E. Smith: Your witness.

H. R. Jeffrey: No further questions.

The next witness for the defense proved to be Mr. Hess, who stated:

Mr. Hess: (Enthusiastically) In their second year, they gladly accepted the addition of auto mechanics and home nursing to the curriculum. When the scarlet fever epidemic caused the cancellation of the G.A.A. and Hi-Y Christmas dances, and even of the Christmas concert, a 30-year tradition, did they complain? No! They willingly gave up Mr. Glunts, Mr. Lohan, and Mr. Cropley to the armed forces, and Mr. Lynch and Mr. Russo to other schools. Again able leaders were chosen in Bob Tyson, Bruce Stone, Betty Lu Tolman, Bill Swan, and Patty Rapp. Not many were absent during that 20-degree below cold snap, despite the frozen ears and frostbitten knees.

Voice from the courtroom: That's when the girls wore slacks!!!

Judge Hill: Irrelevant! Silence in the court!

E. E. Smith: Have you anything else to add, Mr. Hess.

Mr. Hess: Oh yes! To continue, many members of the Class of '44 took part in the Oratorio presented by the Glee Clubs, where the "Hymn of Praise" and "New Earth" were sung. The Harvard book prize was won by Peter Harriott and Norton Harding, and the Radcliffe book prize by Mildred Greis and Dorothy-Ann Freeman, all members of this illustrious, exceptional, deserving, amazing, terrific . . .

H. R. Jeffrey: Objection!

Judge Hill: Sustained. Continue, counselor.

E. E. Smith: No further questions.

H. R. Jeffrey: Ah . . . no cross examination.

E. E. Smith: I'd like to call my last witness, Mr. Page.

Bailiff Brown: Mr. Page to the stand! (Gosh, this is monotonous.)

Mr. Page loses no time in closing the case for the defense with his testimony:

Mr. Page: (Breathlessly) Why, their last year was a triumph! Just listen to this record: the class officers were the same as in the previous year, and equally efficient; a bigger and better Recorder was published with the aid of several of the members of the senior class, who, in spite of the mid-year change of advisors, from Mr. Baker who was transferred, to Miss Sauer, continued to produce a fine paper; the Christmas concert in which many members of the class participated was, as usual, superb, the first play, "Girl Shy," presented by the newly-formed dramatic club under the direction of Mrs. Ione Springer and Janet Fehm, brought into light the hidden talents of several seniors; again the G.A.A. Christmas dance and Hi-Y Crystal Ball were successful; these seniors earned a large part of the credit for the Honor Roll of alumni in the armed forces; they were partly responsible for the organization of the P.T.S.A. which, in turn, suggested the remodeling of the girls' gymnasium and shower room, and the enlargement of the powder room; they won the "Little Three" Championship in football; they . . .

H. R. Jeffrey: Your honor, I object!

Judge Hill: Objection overruled! Let the witness continue.

Mr. Page: Well, all this was not enough! Their high school career was brought to a smashing climax by their unsurpassed Senior Prom, Class Banquet, Blue and White . . .

E. E. Smith: Mr. Page, I feel that you have given the jury sufficient evidence on which to base their decision. Thank you. You may step down.

H. R. Jeffrey: At the risk of becoming a bore, I repeat that I have no cross examination.

E. E. Smith: The defense rests its case, your honor.

H. R. Jeffrey: The prosecution rests.

Judge Hill: Members of the jury, you have heard the evidence placed before you. Let us have a just verdict.

The jury, gaily attired in the class colors, dark green and white, files out of the courtroom, deliberates twenty-three seconds, and files back in again. The jury foreman, B. F. Jackson, approaches the judge:

Judge Hill: Has the jury reached a verdict?

B. F. Jackson: We have, your honor.

Judge Hill: How do you find the Class of 1944?

B. F. Jackson: We find the Class of 1944 . . . NOT GUILTY!!

Murmurs of "Gee, now we can really graduate!" and "Our name isn't mud, after all!" fill the courtroom. Every face in sight is wreathed in smiles . . . even that of the prosecuting attorney. Could it be that he was for us all along? Oh no! Yet, he might have been . . . HMMMMM . . .

The Prophecy of the Class of 1944

It is the year 1964. The sunrise of Peace has flooded the whole world with Justice and Enlightenment. Science with firm hand has fashioned government in the light of the Ideal. Universally, men are equals; Democracy is the by-word of the age. Lest the last vestiges of storied monarchy disappear from the globe, and the traditions of ancient royal grandeur become extinct, a certain scholarly group has gathered to the retreat of Classitopia. Here is a living museum of blood-stained feudalism.

A little band of pilgrims is approaching the center of the region, the castle Classical. As our band comes nearer its walls, the Keeper of the Gate approaches to see if we be friend or foe. Imagine our surprise when we realize the Keeper of the Gate is none other than our old classmate, Frank Fogelson. When he recognizes us, his welcome is overwhelming and we ride over the drawbridge into the castle. The Benevolent Despot of Classitopia has ordered that we be treated as royal visitors and we are told that the entire castle is ours to command. Frank has placed us in the hands of Dotty-Ann Freeman, Chief Chaperone of the Royal Household. As she flits ahead of us, we see her giving orders about the meals to the Chief Cook and Bottle Washer, Sir Donn Tryon.

THE PROPHETS

After the evening meal and a good night's repose followed by a hearty breakfast, we ask to be shown the inside of the castle. We are introduced to the Keeper of the Keys, Irwin Pahl, who is the only living being who is able to remember where everything in Classical is. He tells us the logical place to start is at the bottom and work up. Therefore, our first stop is the dungeons, where we are introduced to the Captain of the Guard, Dave Mount, who tells us the dungeons are filled to capacity. His sentences are punctuated by blood-curdling screams from the door behind him. He replies to our inquiry that the room in question is the torture chamber and that the Royal Keeper of the Deer and Forest, Jack Facey, has caught a Meum. The Meums are a band of forest robbers who take hair from the prolific, to give to the bald. The door to the torture chamber swings open and we see the jovial torturer, Bruce Stone, standing over the pinioned Bob Dillman with a pair of hair clippers. Although the victim is tied, it is necessary for Ken Van Loan to sit on his chest to hold him down. As the torture chamber door swings shut, we notice a barely decipherable number, 118.

Dave Mount conducts us down a long, damp corridor with cells on each side. In cell number 224, we see a prisoner standing trial for homicide in an intramural basketball game. We can see that the prisoner is Dave Dale because, although the cell is seven feet high, his knees are tucked up under his chin. Further on, in cell 112, we see a political prisoner who tried to replace the decimal system with the duo-decimal system. Mount explains the seriousness of this offense and maintains that Pete Harriott was lucky to get off with a six-months' term. In cell 214, we see a criminal serving his six-day sentence; Fred Roy is in for the heinous crime of splitting an infinitive. In cell 324, Dave shows us Mary Ellen Miller, who has been convicted of the arsonous crime of trying to split an electron and prove the Miller theory when her lab blew up, blowing half of the castle walls down.

Crouched beside their meager rations of water and dry bread are Ann Fitzsimmons and Bev Vibbert, tear-streaked lassies who let the cows out of pasture too soon. Another inmate of the damp place is Gert Owens, who was caught letting a member of the dread Meums into the kitchen for some of Donn Tryon's famed food. We are promised that we, too, may partake of the delicacies later in the trip. At this point, we pause to note a gruesome twosome, Willie Hutton and Art Hagen engaged in an invigorating conversation contesting whose fault it was that they were caught peering at the scullery maids: Ruth Cook, Jane Corbin, and Pat Clancy. We ask Dave for some example of unpunished lawlessness and he tells us of the adopted son of the Benevolent Despot. The son, Jack Higgins, who has not attended the entertainment of the previous evening, must be another (Jack) Samson and have his locks shorn. We are attracted by screams from the courtyard — horrible in sound! Peering out, we observe the dentist, Joe Mitchell, whacking poor George Michalek on the jaw. The castle jester, Ben Schneider, is watching this scene with interest — noting other facial expressions to add to his repertoire, no doubt.

Passing to another part of the castle, we find much to interest us in the great hall known as la salle d'armes and devoted to the practice of all manly exercises. Our eye is immediately caught by a long-haired acholarly figure with a Shine in his eyes in the middle of the floor known in primitive days as a basketball court. We learn that he is engaged in experimenting for a Latin treatise entitled "Ars Subiciendi," or, freely translated, "The Art of Shooting." Our guide informs us that this austere person was once famous as "high-scorer" Bob Blinn.

He has just made his 7,260th basket. Assisting him in this scientific research is Chet Chambers, who hands the great master an unending supply of basket balls, taking careful note of Bob's inimitable style and flawless execution. Our attention is suddenly drawn away by a furious and bloody brawl in one corner of this huge room. After frantic inquiries, we find that the participants are Mal Johnson, Charley Bailey (nicknamed Barbarossa because of his long red beard), and Jack Bills — knights-errant renowned throughout Classiotopia for their chivalry, who have received the Order of the Pink Garter for their outstanding services to the fair sex. Each has rescued hundreds of fair damsels from the clutches of hungry, drooling wolves. We leave them struggling in mortal combat for the right to save Kitty McKeown from the clutches of Bill Bailey, who has pursued her perfumed scent over eight continents.

Still amazed and wonder-struck at what we have seen, we withdraw in haste, not wishing to become involved in this herculean contest.

Night has fallen over Castle Classical and our host has prepared a sumptuous banquet in our honor. We shall not pause to describe the rich and varied fare; let it suffice to say that the rationed days during the Great War of our youth seem remote indeed. After drinking an even 500 toasts to our renewed friendships, we are in a most happy frame of mind. Elaborate plans have been made for our entertainment. Walter Weitzman eminent statesman, upon whose efforts the fate of the world hangs in balance, delivers an after-dinner address of profound political and sociological implications. When wave after wave of tumultuous applause has died away, the genial "emcee", Bob Tyson, introduces a concert ensemble composed of Bob Ball, pianist; Charles Neidel, clarinetist; Caroline Bulkley, flutist, and Glenn Coulter, 'cellist, who play with consummate artistry "Mareseatoatsanddoseatoats." Next comes a solo by Sheldon Goidell, the versatile violin virtuoso who is known as "well-done" Sheldon in political circles.

"Beans" on K. P.

The climax of the evening is reached when George Bliss, Royal Songster of Classitopia, sings the operatic aria, "Pistol Packin' Mama". Our enjoyment of this masterpiece of music is increased by the harmonizing of Peter Prouty, who wears on his chest an imposing array of ribbons and medals won by his flying skill and valor in the Great War of our youth. As dawn is just breaking over this scene of nocturnal revelry, the guests are all carried to their rooms for a good night's sleep by Jimmy Bresnahan and Howard Brownson, two of the more sober-minded and erudite of the castle guard.

In the morning, our group now descends into the nerve center of the castle, the section most heavily guarded by the castle guard, the kitchen. The first person we see is Brian Stone with a side of venison on his shoulder which he has just carried up from the cellar.

He balances the mass on two fingers of his left hand and signs the delivery sheet which all carriers of valuables are required to do. As we look inside, we see a veritable bee-hive of activity. Anna-May Bousquet and Jean Burke, robed in spotless white aprons and hats, are already preparing the evening meal. The work is done in time to the music of Andy Leslie and his saxophone. Over in a corner, we see our old friend, Beans Winkler, peeling potatoes as a punishment for giving one of the castle guards a hot-foot. Next to him, we see

Bill Shea and Isobel Hunter busily juggling dishes which they are supposed to be washing, also as a punishment for lack of respect for the castle guard. Bill has an elfin look on his face. He has just broken a trenchard and he hopes nobody saw him do it besides silent Dan Martin, who doesn't count. The side of venison we just saw is being hacked into juicy steaks by Charley Ryan. Charley is keeping perfect time to the music with his hatchet, throwing in a syncopated beat now and then. The wine steward, Joe Meegan, is uncorking coca-cola bottles in tempo, and filling the 300 flagons in front of him. But what's this? — out of the corner of our eyes we can see a stealthy figure sneaking up behind the cauldron of frosting for tonight's cakes and plunging his fingers into the chocolate mixture. Immediately the castle guard in charge of the kitchen, Bruce Skipton, whose eagle eye nothing escapes, is upon the culprit. Jimmy Harrington is up to his old tricks. The miscreant, maddened by Estelle Pottern's heady frosting, is put in with the potato-peeling-and-dish-washing brigade, and his job of stirring the frosting is given to that pillar of trustworthiness, Dick Johnson, who, up to now, has been busily emptying the drinking cups as fast as the steward fills them. Our guide now takes us through the refectory and up the stairs where we continue our tour of inspection.

As we mount the stairs to the tower, horrible cries chill our blood. Fearfully we climb, curiosity overcoming fear. We find "Comrade" Robert Tuthill pacing back and forth in a tiny room at the top, and exhorting the gulls that fly in and out of the windows to join in his plot to overthrow Classitopia.

Looking out the window, we notice a large plank protruding from a wall slot. Our guide has just started to explain its purpose when a large procession mounts the stairs to our right. Sally Shaw is prodding two comely wenches, Clare Webster and Barbara Cooley, before her. They are made to walk the plank, for they have been found guilty of running in the stately, Classical classic-halls.

We are relieved to find that the plank extends over a swimming pool suspended on the battlements. A large crowd has assembled to watch the flight of the culprits, and Peggy Matchett has been placed at the edge of the pool to insure their safety.

At the opposite end of the pool, Jocelyn Stedman and Judy Roberts are serving tea for a charity benefit.

An entertainment has been provided. Claire Flynn and Gloria Vezina sing a duet with Grace Wagner at the piano. We are very fortunate to have these three, for they are much in demand all over the world and can command high fees. We are not surprised to find Janet Fehm reciting a piece, and we watch as she retires amid thunderous applause.

As the dying sun sends banners of flame across darkening skies, we leave the tower and slowly descend the stairs where we are met by a committee of three: Jack Harriott, John Sundburg, and Bill Swan who claim to be the Fourth Assistants to the Lord High Castle Guide and wish to lead us through the meeting-room of the female attendants of the castle. At first we are inclined to doubt the veracity of these eager young men because of what appears to us to be a wolfish gleam in their eyes. But how could we ever doubt them? We have only to think back to our youth in school when we realize that these boys were the epitome of young goodness. They were studious, quiet, and they never even looked at a girl! Thus reassured, we go with them to the hall. Entering through the giant archway, we are immediately blinded by the brilliance of this swirling group of femininity. The amazing beauty of all Classical wenches is brought back to us with great force. The first person we notice is a maiden who appears to be in deep thought. We recognize Cressa Bushey and ask her what the matter is. She woefully replies that she is not sure whether it is 56 or 57 enemy planes that she shot down in the Great War after women pilots were allowed in the air force. We assure her that it makes no difference, it is a record anyway, and depart for another part of the hall. As our guides have long since disappeared, we are forced to shift for ourselves. We see, over in one corner of the hall, a knot of girls listening with bated breath to someone. We join the little group and discover that the attraction is none other than that great lecturer, authoress, and syndicated love-lorn column writer, Carny Cutler. She is giving a lecture entitled, "How to Lose (Women) Friends and Influence (Men) People". After the lecture, in a gracious little interview, we ask her for the secret of her success. She says the best way to be successful is never to practice what you preach and let someone else do all your work for you. She says she has on her board of writers a highly diversified and intelligent group of young women. For her editorials and criticisms, she depends on Joan Lancaster and Margaretha Dahmen. Her gossip column writers are Eloise Frary, Frances Fraska, Eleanor Hendry, Fern Stevenson, and Patty Rapp. On the love-lorn staff, she has Dorothy Kenerson, Joyce Engleson, and Tammy Snow. Leaving this highly entertaining and informative discussion, we start to wander around, filled with a realization of the enormity of the job of such a news staff. In another corner of the hall, we see several girls in ballerina costumes rehearsing for tomorrow afternoon's entertainment. The co-directors of this troupe are Adriana La Zazera and Phyllis Johnson. At present, they say they are rehearsing a number that was popular in our youth. This piece which requires the utmost skill to perform is called, "Frappez-moi, papa, huit au mètre". We don't recall it, maybe you do. June Radebaugh, who is pianist in this troupe, is having difficulty with what she calls "the idiosyncracies in tempi of this selection". Could it be that she's not hep to the jive? In the middle of the floor, Mildred Greis, Barbara Granfield, Janet Chambers, and Dorothy Bicknell, the four Senior Consuls of the High and Holy League of Gentle Chamber Maids, are considering the possibility of doubling their large and powerful membership. They were forced to call a special meeting of the Consulate to consider the applications for membership of three girls, Jacqueline Marien, Sheila Matthews, and Ethel Orr who are trembling for fear they will be rejected, but after the four dictatresses have scowlingly considered their applications, they grudgingly give their permission and holy sanction to the admittance of the candidates. We should like to stay to see the initiation into the Most Holy League, but we must continue our tour of the hall. We notice three beautiful demoiselles seated on a bench near the door to the corridor combing their hair, as always, trying to tempt young knights-errant under their spells. These sirens of our time are none other than Evy King, Mona Le Page, and Jeanne Adams. It seems to us that they should be fined by the Organized Sirens' Ring for a breach of union rules. The by-laws of the O.S.R. strictly say that no union member may comb her hair alluringly for more than five consecutive minutes in public. These three girls are certainly breaking that rule. They have already attracted two admiring males. Bill Mann and David Post have a peculiar gleam in their eyes. AH! here come our Fourth Assistant Guides again. We haven't seen them since the beginning of the tour of the hall. Walking through the hall, we see Hazel Stutts, the great concert singer, rehearsing a difficult aria to herself, constantly corrected by Gloria "Absolute Pitch" Kaplinger. It sounds vaguely like "Dans l'Humeur," an old aria written in about 1940 and played for the first time by some orchestra called the Glenn Miller Band. Continuing on our way, we see a girl muttering to herself. Coming closer, we recognize Caroline Ryder. She is saying something about revenge and the Senate. We can't imagine what she is talking about, unless it is that debate that she was in and lost to the Senate during our youth. Over in a far corner, we can see Isabelle Budnitz, the eminent English and American History professor giving a lecture on the merits of the Monroe Doctrine as opposed to the Rules for the Use of Commas. Poor Isabelle, she must be mixing metaphors or some such incomprehensible thing, for no one understands what she is talking about. Wouldn't it be wonderful to be so wise that no one could understand you? Over in this corner, we see Norice Mahoney, explorer and adventuress, holding up an elephant skin in one hand and a lion skin in the other. It appears that she killed both at once with her powerful and secret hypnotic gaze.

It is getting late, and dinner time must be approaching. (Out of courtesy to our hosts' vigorous gustatory customs, we simulate an unnaturally ravenous look.) It is rumored that tonight, the Benevolent Despot of Classitopia will dine with the Royal guests. The whole court is summoned to appear in its best. Frank Williamson, Lord High Caller of the Guests to the Royal Dinner, makes his appearance and announces in stentorian tones, with the head waiter, Stanley Gelin, by his side, "Dinner is served". Charlotte Wells, in flowing gong-striker's robes, gives the silver-toned gong a smashing blow, and a slopping sound is heard. Lenore Saffer and Marcia Radner enter, laden down with pails of pink paint. Nancy Tilton, Lord High Hereditary Artist in General to the Crown, directs them to smear all side entrances to the Royal Mead Hall with pink paint to check the onrush of the dinner guests. "Where is the Royal Guard?" Frank inquires, when suddenly he is trampled down by Ronald Czaja, Don Powers, and Alan Johnson, armed with billy-clubs and hot on the scent of dinner. Areathea May Gladden and Lorraine Beaudry are trampled beneath the feet of the thundering herd. The piercing screams of Gurson Kantor alone can be distinguished in the melee. "Hold that line! Hold that line!" In the same charmingly sedate manner, Betty Lu Tolman and Alice Carpenter reach their appointed places. Mary Elizabeth "Plasma" Stone is summoned to revive the casualties on the spot. Generous George Nolan, heedless of his last blood-count, is almost completely drained, as Anne Armstrong, Official Sympathy Dispenser, rapidly restores group morale.

As the excitement subsides, all are seated along the banquet table to watch a figure-skating exhibition by those professionals extraordinaires, Joyce Harris and Cynthia White, on artificial ice for which David Katz holds a patent. It had better be successful for Suzanne Flore, Alice Edwards, and Shirley Carrier have invested in it heavily.

At the conclusion of this ice-dance, a young uproar rises at the banquet hall entrance. A form streaks by, up to the middle of the table where there is but one remaining empty chair. It is Marilyn Hirshhaut, running on her hands. She is the Despot's special messenger, since no one else in the realm is physically able to keep track of the Most High Ruler of Classitopia. She bears tidings to the assemblage of the Despot's approach.

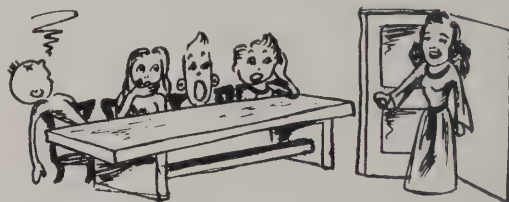

As one man, the company rises to attention and begins intoning the laudatory chant, written by the Court Composer, Martha Hopkins:

"Leave us now all hail to our perpetually whizzing Despot,

When an idea strikes our Despot,

There just ain't no respite . . ."

The door swings open with a flourish of trumpets. The newcomers' jaws fall. 'Od's bodikins! It's Jean Morgan!!

THE CLASS OF 1946

Are Your Actions Significant?

Intelligent men and women rarely allow themselves to say: "What difference does it make if I do this? I'm only one person, I can't do very much harm." These are the words of a thoughtless child. They are indications of a puerile mind. An intelligent adult can readily see that, practiced by all, such irresponsible individualism would destroy society.

Perhaps when the famous categorical imperative passed from the pen of Immanuel Kant, he should have reworded it to read, "No group has the right to do that, which if everybody did it, would destroy society." For today we find certain groups in the world whose only goals are wealth and power for themselves, although they leave in their wake ravaged lands and fatherless children.

It is hard to convince a student that by leaving his tray on the table or by smoking in the boys' room, he is destroying society. It is not difficult to tell a shipworker that by welding parts carelessly, or an Englishman that by lighting a cigarette in a blackout, they are bringing destruction on themselves and society.

One isolated action in your life may not mean much at the time and from your point of view it may not destroy society. But recall the fact that there are people in the world who will see your act and imitate it. If enough people imitate it, you will have done your part in destroying society.

The point is not whether society will be destroyed if you do a thing. The point is that no action is justifiable if, when practiced by many, it results in danger to society.

DOUGLAS CUMMINGS

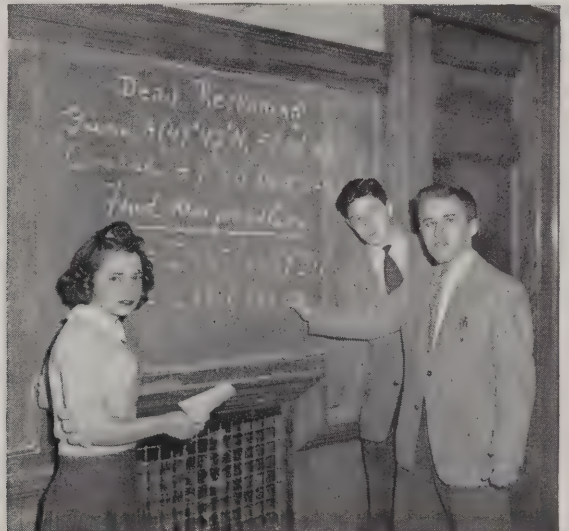

Dr. William C. Hill is giving last minute instructions to Norton Harding, Dorothy Ann Freeman, Nancy Allen, Walter Weitzman, and Mary Ellen Miller. These pupils discussed the subject, "Adjusting for Tomorrow's Freedom", at a symposium held in Boston on October 20 under the auspices of the State P. T. A. The students expressed their ideas of what is necessary for the adjustment of the post-war world.

Alan Johnson, John Reynolds, William Robinson, and William Mann are examining a wind tunnel. This piece of apparatus is used to find the lifting power and the drag of a sample of a wing.

Anita Barrows and Nancy Walton are using a microscope to examine specimens in a Biology Laboratory.

Janice Cunliffe, David Davidson, and Robert Collier are demonstrating a navigation problem. Applications of math to practical problems such as this make the subject vivid.

A Busy Year

The Student Government has completed another busy year. We have not only performed our usual duties of running class elections and managing the Lost and Found, but we have also made many improvements in the school. To our credit is the new girls' powder room, the service honor roll, the raising of $550 to pay for the names on the roll, and the sale of bus tickets. We ran the song contest which gave the school a fine Alma Mater song and two new marching songs; we ran the membership drive for the P. T. S. A.; we helped bring about the early dismissal for seniors. The pictures on the next page give some idea of our varied activities.

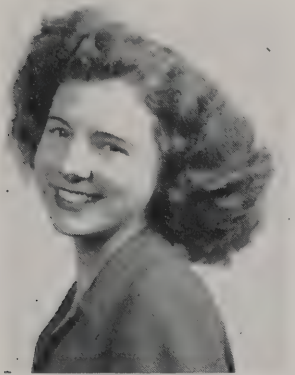

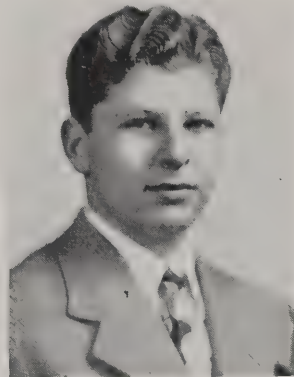

The Student Government begins its meetings with devotional exercises and a salute to the Flag.

Members of the Student Government attended a meeting of the School Board. The people in the picture are: Dr. John Granrud, Superintendent of Schools; Mrs. Mary C. Stephenson, Chairman of the Board; Atty. Theodore V. Quinlivan, member of the Board; Sheldon Goidell, Chairman of the Student Government.

SHELDON GOIDELL
Chairman Second Semester

The Student Government sells over $600 worth of bus tickets a week. The students in the picture taking care of the bus ticket money are: Esther Shub, Marjorie Hollister, Richard Armstrong.

The Student Government is proud of the powder room it sponsored. Barbara Kingsbury, Mary F. Miller, and Jean Morgan are painting furniture for the room.

LET'S MAKE UP

(Comedy in one Act)

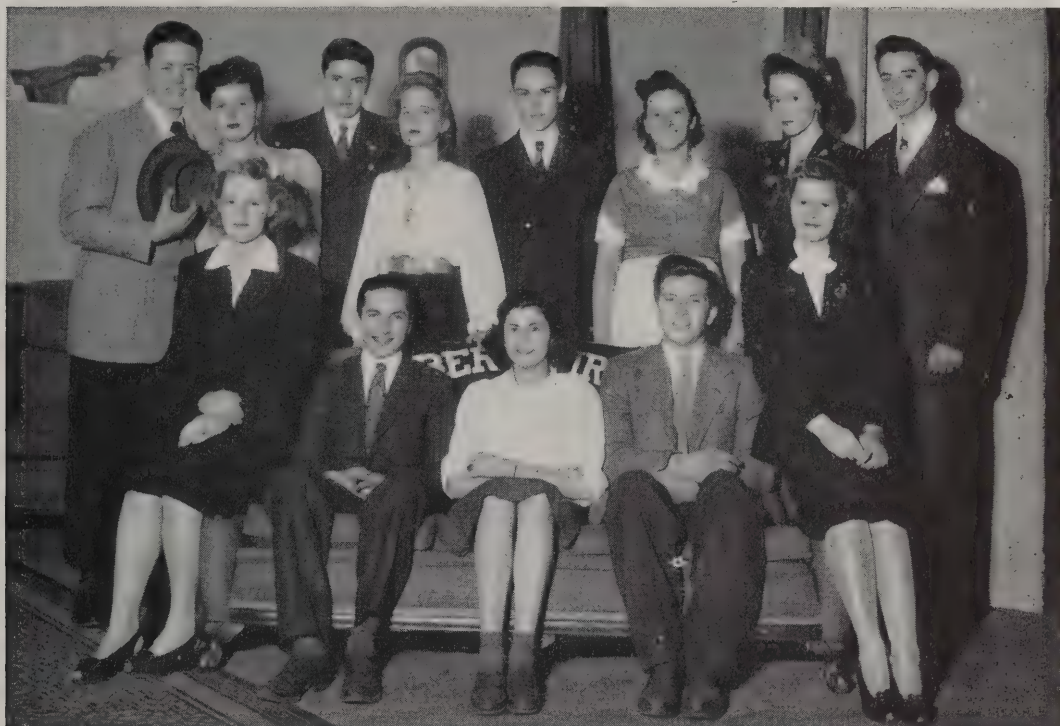

Caroline Cutler [Director], Anita Barrows, Jack Bartlett, Marcia Radner, Dick McMahon, Marilyn Smith, Doug Cummings.

The Dramatic Club was founded this year by an energetic group of students who chose Janet Fehm as their president. Mrs. Springer is the class advisor. They called themselves the "Thespians" and became the first dramatic club Classical has had for five years. They worked hard in trying to establish themselves as a permanent club in Classical. The culmination of their efforts was the play "Girl Shy" which was played to a capacity audience in the Technical High School auditorium. After the play Mr. Hill said it had "put dramatics back on the map for Classical". Much credit is due to the small group who originated the "Thespians" at the beginning of this school year.

Let's Make Up

Doug Cummings and Dick McMahon had the leads in this short comedy which was staged in the Classical Auditorium on May 24 of this year. Carnie Cutler directed the play and Mrs. Ione Springer advised. This one-act comedy was the second "Thespian" production this year.

Girl Shy

Seated, left to right: Marion Sturtevant, Richard McMahon, Janet Fehm [Director], Robert Tyson, Valentine Johnson. Standing, left to right: John Bills, Nancy Seaman, Richard Pervonga, Hope Marindin, Merle Rice, Carolyn Bartlett, Martha Hopkins, John Bartlett.

"Girl Shy", the first production of the newly-formed "Thespians", was staged in the Technical High School Auditorium on January twenty-ninth of this year. The lead, played by Bob Tyson as Tom Arsdale, was girl shy. The girl who finally got him was Babs Sanford, played by Valentine Johnson. Tom's roommate, Oke, was a "fickle-minded boy" enacted by Richard McMahon, while Marion Sturtevant played the part of Peaches Carter, Oke's girl. Jack Bartlett played Tom's father and Martha Hopkins played the part of Tom's aunt. The comical colored maid, Asma, was Caroline Bartlett, and Merle Rice portrayed the dean of the college that the boys attended. "Tom's pet aversion", the home town girl who came to the college and found Tom in the clutches of Babs Sanford, was Sylvia Webster, enacted by Hope Marindin. Much fun and laughter were provided by Birdie Laverne [Nancy Seaman], Chuck Mayo [Jack Bills], and the college poet, Alfred Tennyson Mergatoyd [Richard Pervonga]. The play was a huge success and the auditorium was well filled. Advised by Mrs. Ione Springer and directed by Janet Fehm, president of the "Thespians", the dramatic club has had a very successful season. The money received from the play went to the Student Treasury.

LET'S MAKE UP (Comedy in one Act)

Caroline Cutler [Director], Anita Barrows, Jack Bartlett, Marcia Radner, Dick McMahon, Marilyn Smith, Doug Cummings.

The Dramatic Club was founded this year by an energetic group of students who chose Janet Fehm as their president. Mrs. Springer is the class advisor. They called themselves the "Thespians" and became the first dramatic club Classical has had for five years. They worked hard in trying to establish themselves as a permanent club in Classical. The culmination of their efforts was the play "Girl Shy" which was played to a capacity audience in the Technical High School auditorium. After the play Mr. Hill said it had "put dramatics back on the map for Classical". Much credit is due to the small group who originated the "Thespians" at the beginning of this school year.

Let's Make Up

Doug Cummings and Dick McMahon had the leads in this short comedy which was staged in the Classical Auditorium on May 24 of this year. Carnie Cutler directed the play and Mrs. Ione Springer advised. This one-act comedy was the second "Thespian" production this year.

"Girl Shy", the first production of the newly-formed "Thespians", was staged in the Technical High School Auditorium on January twenty-ninth of this year. The lead, played by Bob Tyson as Tom Arsdale, was girl shy. The girl who finally got him was Babs Sanford, played by Valentine Johnson. Tom's roommate, Oke, was a "fickle-minded boy" enacted by Richard McMahon, while Marion Sturtevant played the part of Peaches Carter, Oke's girl. Jack Bartlett played Tom's father and Martha Hopkins played the part of Tom's aunt. The comical colored maid, Asma, was Caroline Bartlett, and Merle Rice portrayed the dean of the college that the boys attended. "Tom's pet aversion", the home town girl who came to the college and found Tom in the clutches of Babs Sanford, was Sylvia Webster, enacted by Hope Marindin. Much fun and laughter were provided by Birdie Laverne [Nancy Seaman], Chuck Mayo [Jack Bills], and the college poet, Alfred Tennyson Mergatoyd [Richard Pervonga]. The play was a huge success and the auditorium was well filled. Advised by Mrs. Ione Springer and directed by Janet Fehm, president of the "Thespians", the dramatic club has had a very successful season. The money received from the play went to the Student Treasury.

The Categorical Imperative

"No one has the right to do that which, if every one did it, would destroy society." For thirty-four years, this incomparable maxim of Immanuel Kant has formed the basic rule for student conduct at Classical High School. It is the duty of each and every one who has attended this school to live in the light of that maxim. It has moulded the thinking of those to whom it has been given. It has brought principle and a strength of purpose to many, who without such a guiding light would have been unworthy of their Alma Mater. It has become the ultimate law of our society.

Today conditions are different from what they have ever been before. A titanic struggle is being waged in the four corners of the globe for the destruction of those forces which have trampled human rights and human equality beneath their bloody boots. Men guilty of felony, plunder, and murder now stalk the face of the earth unpunished and free. If the dawn of human salvation through a new world order for mankind is not to be obscured by the shadow of malignity and crime, we must earnestly endeavour to put into effective universal practice those theories that have been taught in the class-rooms of free nations for hundreds of years.

These are higher laws than those enacted by emperors or parliaments. Every human being has an accepted right to free and equal participation in the universal fraternity of mankind. We have been taught the ethical principles of Christian and Hebrew culture: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God"; and "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself".

Let us then, the young men and women of a great democracy, step forward and do our share to put these laws into practical application. If every one of us guides his life by these maxims, and in particular applies the incontrovertible logic of our school motto to his own case, our class will be worthy of the school that has graduated us.

FOOTBALL

Classical's 1944 football record was four wins, two losses, and one tie. This was a good season in spite of what was expected. The Bulldogs took Chicopee, Enfield, Trade, and Commerce, beating the latter two for The Little Three Championship; while losing to West Springfield and Williston and tying Amherst. Co-Captain Bill "Lefty" Powell was the leading scorer with 48 points. He was also runner-up for high scoring in Western Mass. "Lefty" with "broken-field" running, and his pep afield, was a spark to our victories. Others who stood out were Co-Captain Bill Mann, Bob Dillman, and Bill Foster, backs, Bob Tyson and Ralph Steiger, guards, Bill Hutton and "Red" Bailey, ends, tackle Tom Howard, and center "Beans" Winkler.

Two days before the Trade game our manager, Lincoln Sanderson, passed away, and the game was especially played and won for "Link."

Powell, Bailey, and Tyson were chosen All-City, and Powell again was elected to a berth on Western Mass.

Since the end of the season, both Foster and Powell have entered the U. S. Navy.

The most exciting game that was played this season was the one with West Springfield. It was a clean, hard-fought, evenly-matched game.

SOCCER

The Classical soccer team had a poor season this year. Out of nine games the Bulldogs won one, tied three, and lost five. The team showed promise early in the season by tying the Trade team 0-0. It was the first time in several years that Classical was not defeated by the Beavers. The most outstanding game of the year was the lone Bulldog victory over Tech, the city champions. Don Vaughan was again the soccer coach. Captain Dave Mount, Marvin Schreiber, and Bob Genden were the backbone of the defense with Bill Swan and Mike Marchese leading the scoring.

HOCKEY

Classical's hockey team finished its second wartime season with three wins and one tie. Although the Bulldogs had beaten Tech twice and every other city rival once, there was no city champion declared. The Blue and White sextet again failed to finish a complete season due to mild weather which raised havoc with the ice. The Bulldogs did, however, finish their second consecutive undefeated season and preserved Coach Sid Burr's record of never having lost a high school hockey game. Charles "Red" Bailey, Classical's fine backliner and leading scorer, was chosen captain by the team. The Bulldogs opened up their season with a 2-2 tie with Cathedral. "Red" Bailey scored the first goal and in the overtime with Classical behind 1-2 Tom Howard scored on a power play for a tie 2-2. The second game marked the return of Bob Ellsworth and this time Classical rolled over Tech 3-1 with Bailey, Swan, and Dillman scoring and Ellsworth and Minott assisting. In the third game the Bulldogs, led by Bill Swan, ran roughshod over the Trade team 4-0. Swan made two goals and one assist and "Red" Bailey and Bob Dillman were credited with the other two goals assisted by Paul Minott. The team finished their season with an impressive 3-0 victory over their ancient rival, Tech. This time Ellsworth, Johnson, and Bailey netted the markers while Steiger turned in a very neat shutout while in the nets. Something must be said of Steiger's fine record while in the nets. He limited the opposition to three goals in four games while his mates were banging home twelve.

BASKETBALL

The 1943-44 edition of the Classical basketball team finished the season with a record of 9 wins and 9 defeats. Led by Co-Captains Bob Blinn and Jim Gaylord, the Bulldogs boasted as the high point of the season 2 upset wins over Tech, the first being the initial league defeat for the Tigers in two years.

An unexpected defeat by Ludlow opened the season, but the Vaughan men followed with 2 quick triumphs over Amherst and Chicopee. Hampered by injuries, Classical was next downed by Tech and Amherst. The Bulldogs were upset by Trade, but came through with a fine victory over Tech, 34-27, and whipped Monson, 35-21. Classical then dropped 2 in quick succession to Cathedral and to Chicopee, and defeated Trade, 36-25. Tech was next, and in the most thrilling game of the year, the team upset Tech again, 33-31. A win over Monson and Cathedral, and losses to Cathedral and Trade closed the season.

Bob Blinn, high scorer in the city and in Western Mass., was named on the All-City and All-Western Mass. teams. Jim Gaylord also rated an All-City berth.

INTRAMURAL BASKETBALL

Intramural basketball had another interesting season this year with Phil Page's help. The Classy Five and the Double Dribbles were champs, in their respective leagues. This season there were two leagues, the American and the National. The Double Dribbles had a clean slate of eight victories, whereas the Classy Five were defeated by the Fargoes in the play-offs. This was their only defeat. The Terriers and the McGinty Maulers, last year's champs, were in second place in the American League. The Fargoes and the Pointless Wonders were second and third in the National. "Stewie" McCracken was high scorer in the American League with a total of 77 points. In the National League Dave Hungerford was high scorer with a total of 86 points.

THE GOLF TEAM

As in the past, Classical is represented in the city golf league. The team has lost heavily through graduation and to the armed forces. However, it is fortunate to have two lettermen, Co-Captains Arthur Rist and William Shea. Other members of the squad will include John Bartlett, John Sundburg, George Michalek, and Tom McSweeney. The remaining members of the team will be chosen from a group of promising candidates.

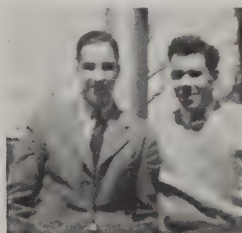

Captains Rist and Shea have great hopes of annexing the City Title which was last year given to Tech. Although Jack Newell, Don Garrison, and Lew Shaw will be sorely missed, Art and Bill are counting heavily on several newcomers to the squad. John Bartlett and John Sundburg have both shown that they are worthy men with the club, and several juniors have turned in low scores.

Besides playing in the city league, the team has scheduled several matches with other Western Massachusetts schools and hopes to play Williston and Wilbraham. Classical will also make the trip to Cranwell for the annual "Western Massachusetts Schoolboy Tournament" in June.

THE CROSS COUNTRY TEAM

During September, 1943, a new sport was added to the athletic curriculum of Classical High School. This was cross-country running.

Organized by Jack Facey, who was elected captain, the team practised on a course laid out in Forest Park. Beginning in the early days of September, ten boys, Dave Dale, Jack Facey, Dave Hungerford, Don Powers, Thurman Pava, Ollie Patrell, Fred Torrey, Morgan Levine, Bob Woody, and Richard Dobbin, ran over the course daily until the middle of November.

During the season, only two meets were scheduled: one with Mount Hermon and the other with Hartford.

In the first, the team was defeated fifteen to forty. Dave Dale was the first Classical runner across the finish with Jack Facey behind him. They finished ninth and tenth.

At Hartford, against a team that was Connecticut State champions for four successive seasons, Classical reversed their position and came out three points ahead, twenty-nine to twenty-six. Leminex of Hartford won the race, but Jack Facey, Dave Dale, and Don Powers finished second, third, and fourth in that order.

Outstanding Track Men

THE TRACK TEAM

The prospects for the 1944 track season look pretty good. As a result of the fall Cross-Country Team, Classical should have an advantage over the other schools this year. Thirty boys came out at the first meeting. Outstanding veterans returning from last year's team are: Dave Dale, city mile champion, Jack Facey, half-miler, and Jim Gaylord, shot-put. Other returning lettermen are Bennett Schneider, Ollie Patrell, and Doug Cummings. Don Powers, quarter-miler, a veteran from the cross-country team, is expected to show up well in the coming season.

The team will have single meets with Trade, Tech, and Williston. They will finish the season with the Western Massachusetts meet on May 27, and the Intra-City meet on June 10.

THE SWIMMING TEAM

Last spring the three outstanding mermen of Classical, Ollie Patrell, "Buck" Eldert, and Scottie Wheaton, organized the new Classical High Swimming Team. Under the leadership of "Sid" Burr, they traveled to Massachusetts State College for the first annual inter-scholastic swimming meet, and made a grand showing. They gained a third place in the meet as well as setting two records: one by Ollie Patrell in the backstroke, and the other by the whole team in the relay.

This was the first attempt to make swimming a major sport in Western Massachusetts high schools; and because of the wartime need for good swimmers, it is hoped that many others will participate next year.

TENNIS

Having lost only two lettermen from last year's city championship team, the boys are looking forward to a very successful season. Led by Captain Shel Goidell for the second year, the team will participate in city and out-of-town matches, and it has been entered in the Western Mass. Sports Writers' Association Tournament. The team is fortunate in having besides Goidell four outstanding veterans of last year's team. They are Jerry Radding, "Lefty" Gelin, "Frenchy" Reed, and Bruce Skipton. Dave Katz, brother of a former Classical tennis captain and considered one of the best in the city, returns after a year's absence due to sickness. John Mitchell, a capable and promising freshman, finishes off the team. The team at present is:

BASEBALL

Classical's baseball team for the 1944 season will boast only three regulars returned from last year's squad. These are Ken Rickson, second baseman, who batted .300 last year; Bill Bailey, a third baseman and pitcher; and Bobby Blinn, pitcher and outfielder.

At first glance it would seem that Classical's chances for a championship team were quite remote, but Coach Sid Burr is expected to come up with some good freshman and junior material.

Going around the infield, it looks as if Red Bailey will do the catching chores, Charlie Ryan will be at first, Ken Rickson at second, Burnie Londerville at short, and Mike Marchese will hold down the hot corner. Bob Blinn and Bill Bailey will split up the pitching duty with "Chuck" Weinstein available for relief work. The outfield will be made up of Bob Blinn and Bill Bailey, depending upon who is pitching, Bob Ellsworth, and either Fran Austin or Bob Strachan, two promising freshmen.

Left to right: Mary Elizabeth Stone, Janice Bosworth, Carol Myers.

Janice Bosworth, Mary Elizabeth Stone, and Carol Myers received G. A. A. honor pins this year. To be eligible for the pin, girls must be active in sports; they must be leaders and good sports; they must have no failing marks during the three years.

BASKETBALL

BASKETBALL

The basketball season for the girls has been exceptionally fine. The team won all but one of the interscholastic games. The outstanding feminine basketball players were: Marilyn Hirschhaut, Janice Bosworth [Captain], Mary Elizabeth Stone, Roberta Bemis, and June Radebaugh. Mrs. Wright instructed and coached the girls throughout the season.

BADMINTON

BADMINTON

Topping a group of 26 girls who participated in the badminton tournament, Marilyn Hirschhaut and Joan Critchlow were the victors of the final match. The close runner-ups were Mary Elizabeth Stone and Janice Bosworth. Since February the matches have been held every Monday and Wednesday afternoons. The final winners were determined through the process of elimination. The girls were instructed by Mrs. Dayton and Miss Carter.

THE OUTING CLUB

OUTING CLUB

This year the Outing Club enjoyed hikes twice a month, one bike hike and one a walking hike. Janice Bosworth was president, Joan Critchlow, secretary-treasurer, and Miss Carter, advisor and regular participant. The girls hiked to Wilbraham, Robinson State Park, Hampden, East Longmeadow, Forest Park, and Sixteen Acres. The season ended with a party for members.

BEGINNERS' SWIMMING AND LIFESAVING CLASSES

Classical girls came out enthusiastically for a beginners' swimming class, organized by Miss Carter, on Monday afternoons. Many in the class are now well on their way toward Senior Lifesaving badges. A group of twenty-four, who had already learned to swim, completed a course in Senior Lifesaving under the direction of Peggy Matchett and Norma Borrner. All passed this course, held at Trinity Church, which lasted for eight weeks — two hours a week. Several of the girls went on to take a Red Cross Water Safety Instructor's Course at Springfield College.

VOLLEYBALL

Mondays and Wednesdays proved to be exciting times for volleyball fans. Mrs. Dayton and Miss Carter viewed the improvements with satisfaction. After about three weeks' practice, Tech girls were challenged to a game held in the Classical boys' gym. Under the leadership of Marilyn Hirschhaut, captain, Classical hit her way to victory. Refreshments were served following the game and all parted the best of friends.

HORSEBACK RIDING

Riding started early in the fall at the East Long-meadow Riding Stables for Classical's many enthusiasts. During the winter, indoor meetings were conducted by the club's president, Madeline von Tobel. Mrs. Dayton helped at these meetings. Questionnaires, diagrams, pamphlets, and books helped in the better understanding of horsemanship. Riding was again resumed during the spring.

Stone, Lorraine Cowles.

BOWLING

Bowling for girls at Classical was started in 1939. Since then it has become a most popular indoor sport. This year bowling was done at either Bickford or Apremont Alleys on any day of the week. This season ended with tryouts for the Western Massachusetts Bowling Tournament, but the girls were eliminated before the finals. The ten tournament bowlers were Joan Critchlow, Gloria Miller, Janice Bosworth, Mary Elizabeth Stone, Valentine Johnson, Lorraine Cowles, Mary Cramer, Elaine Sequin, Joan Stonerod, and Marilyn Hirschhaut.

SOFTBALL

Girls' softball started out this year in May with a bang. So big a bang that new balls had constantly to be put to use. More than thirty girls turned out at the first meeting, when Miss Carter, club umpire and advisor, started the ball moving. After several weeks of practice, a first team consisting of the following girls was chosen: Janice Bosworth, Mary Stone, Dorothy Weldon, Marilyn Hirschhaut, Nancy Wallace, Regina Keyes, Jean McIntyre, Shirley Stanton, Joan Critchlow, and Corinne Cooper.
